

Senior Analyst, Mexican Politics – Full-Time

Emerging Markets Political Risk Analysis (EMPRA) is looking for a Senior Analyst with expertise in the Mexican political system and specific interest in Morena to join our team in Mexico City. The successful candidate's day-to-day work will include conducting research, drafting reports, holding meetings with clients, and other tasks related to providing political risk analysis to EMPRA's clients. The successful candidate will have a deep knowledge of Mexico's political system and a strong understanding of the political workings of Morena.

Responsibilities

- Write in-depth reports, identifying, assessing and forecasting political risks.
- Conduct in-depth, research driven analysis of Mexico's political dynamics and clearly deliver information to EMPRA's clients
- Monitor and report on developments related to legislative actions and national and local political developments
- Work with the Head of Research to expand coverage of Mexico's political system and determine where value can be added to EMPRA's research projects
- Collect information and data on topics relevant to Mexico's political system
- Periodically research and report on other areas including education or health policy, infrastructure, public security, or other areas
- Attend conferences and meetings with policy experts and decision-makers
- Develop a continuously expanding database of contacts
- Contribute to other EMPRA projects and services when necessary

Requirements:

- 3+ years of experience in political affairs, political risk consulting, journalism, or a related area
- Previous research experience
- Bachelor's degree in political science, public policy, or a related field (master's degree strongly preferred, but not required). Applications from candidates with other areas of education experience will be accepted but they must present a deep understanding of Mexico's political system as well as significant experience in the field
- Native level English skills (including the ability to draft and edit documents in English)
- Proficiency in Spanish
- Excellent knowledge of the Microsoft Office Suite as well as G Suite
- Experience with one or more econometrics programs
- Ability to adapt to changing work requirements and adhere to deadlines is highly valued
- Highly driven, organized and able to work independently with little guidance

Candidates should possess excellent interpersonal skills. A high degree of professionalism and discretion is required.

Occasional travel may be necessary.

Those who do not meet the aforementioned requirements are asked not to submit an application.

Compensation:

Compensation will be commensurate with the candidate's qualifications and experience.

Application Requirements:

Candidates should submit a cover letter, resume, and a short sample of past research to Jonathan Terluk at jterluk@empira.net by September 27. All documents should be submitted in English.

Please include "EMPRA Energy Analyst Application - [LAST NAME]" in the subject line.

Letters of recommendation are welcome but not required.

Interviews will be conducted in English and Spanish.

About EMPRA

Emerging Markets Political Risk Analysis (EMPRA) is Mexico's leading political risk advisory and consulting firm. EMPRA delivers critical intelligence and independent analysis on political and security developments and their impact on key areas of the economy. Our services help decision makers anticipate and manage changes in the political landscape with timely and successful strategies.

EMPRA's office is located in Mexico City.